Feeling sleepy?

This week's topic in Health Matters is sleep. We interviewed top expert Dr Caroline Webber.

① Sleep is food for the brain. People aren't usually aware of it, but it is necessary for a healthy life. New research is constantly being done to help scientists understand the different ways that sleep affects our body and mind. About one third of your life is spent asleep, which means that in your lifetime you will sleep for about twenty-five years.

② It depends, but most people don't get enough. You should get used to sleeping the same amount every night. Avoid sleeping less during the week and trying to catch up at the weekend. This will make you feel more tired. Eight hours a night is probably the best for most people. However, according to recent studies, teenagers need at least 9.5 hours of sleep. In fact, some schools are considering starting lessons later to help with this.

③ Lack of sleep is unhealthy, even dangerous. It leads to low levels of concentration and harms your memory. And remember, a brain hungry for sleep won't stay awake forever. It will fall asleep even when you don't expect it, perhaps when you're behind the wheel.

④ All human beings spend about 2,100 days dreaming in their lifetime. Some dreams are scary and some don't make any sense. Until the age of three, babies only dream about other people, and from that age they have lots more nightmares than adults, until they are seven or eight years old. Even blind people dream. People who are born blind don't see images but they dream with the senses of sound, smell and touch as well as with emotion.
