Overtourism: Too Many Visitors

Tourism can be a positive force for local communities. It generates jobs, supports small businesses, and helps protect cultural heritage. Yet many famous destinations are now struggling with overtourism—a situation where visitor numbers become so high that they harm the environment and disrupt local life.

Venice, Barcelona, and Bali clearly show how serious this issue can be. In Venice, massive cruise ships deliver thousands of tourists daily, leaving streets packed and making it hard for residents to move around.

LIVEWORKSHEETS

In Barcelona, many locals say they can no longer afford the city center because hotels and short-term rentals have pushed housing costs up. Constant crowds and noise undermine residents' well-being.

The environment also pays a heavy price. Popular beaches are often littered with rubbish. Historic buildings and monuments are damaged when millions of visitors touch or climb on them. Natural landscapes lose their charm when they are degraded by excessive foot traffic. In some places, coral reefs have even been destroyed by careless tourists stepping on them or polluting the water.

To tackle this problem, many destinations are taking steps to manage tourism. Some limit daily visitor numbers, while others introduce entrance fees to control crowds and fund conservation. These measures can protect valuable places for future generations and help communities reduce the harmful effects of mass tourism.

[Adapted from UNWTO Report on Overtourism and Sustainable Tourism]

Question 31: Which statement is TRUE according to the passage?

A. Overtourism mainly benefits residents by lowering living costs in cities.

B. Cruise ships bring fewer visitors, so Venice stays quiet most days.

C. In Barcelona, housing costs rise because hotels and short-term rentals grow.

D. Entrance fees are used only to attract more tourists to busy places.

Question 32: The word "undermine" in paragraph 2 is closest in meaning to _____.

A. weaken B. decorate C. ignore D. protect Question 33: What is the best main idea of the passage?

A. The historical development of Venice and Barcelona as major global tourist hubs.

B. The negative impacts of over-tourism and the measures taken to ensure sustainability.

C. The financial benefits of mass tourism for small businesses and cultural heritage.

D. How the increase in cruise ships contributes to the destruction of natural landscapes.

Question 34: According to the final paragraph, how do entrance fees contribute to solving the problem?

A. They ensure that only the wealthiest tourists can access famous natural landscapes.

B. They provide a source of income to support the restoration of valuable locations.

C. They are designed to completely stop all tourists from visiting popular destinations.

D. They help local residents pay for their rising housing costs in the city centers.

Question 35: The word " degraded" in paragraph 3 is OPPOSITE in meaning to _____.

A. polluted B. damaged C. improved D. broken

Question 36: Why might limiting daily visitor numbers help a destination, based on the passage?

A. It guarantees every tourist will spend more money on hotels and food.

B. It allows cruise ships to enter ports more easily and park longer.

C. It encourages locals to move away from crowded city centers for work.

D. It can reduce crowding and damage while protecting places for the future.

Four phrases/sentences have been removed from the text below. For each question, mark the letter A, B, C or D on your answer sheet to indicate the correct option that best fits each of the numbered blanks from 37 to 40.

Shopping is changing quickly because of AI and social media. (37) _____. But it also raises privacy questions: do we really want brands to know so much about our habits? At the same time, live-stream shopping is getting more popular. It is entertaining and the deals look "too good to miss," (38) _____.

Another hot discussion is sustainable shopping in a time of high prices. People talk (39) _____. However, some companies may use greenwashing, so shoppers need clearer proof, not just nice words. On the other side, many families simply choose cheaper options, so sustainability can feel like a luxury. This creates a real debate: who should pay for a cleaner supply chain—brands, governments, or consumers?

In my view, the best approach is balance. We can enjoy trends, but stay in control: set a budget, wait before buying, and check reviews from different sources. (40) _____.

A. about "eco-friendly" clothes, recycled packaging, and second-hand platforms

B. Many apps now suggest products based on what we watch or click, and this feels helpful

C. yet the pressure to buy fast can lead to impulse purchases

D. If more people demand transparency, shopping can become both smarter and more responsible

Question 37: _____. Question 38: _____. Question 39: _____. Question 40: _____.
