Too Connected to Sleep

Doctors in many countries are seeing the same problem among teenagers: young people who feel tired during the day and cannot sleep well at night. In many cases, the cause is not illness. It is their phone. Studies show that many teenagers check their devices right before going to bed. The light from screens tells the brain to stay awake, making it hard for the body to rest. Over time, bad sleep affects mood, memory, and the ability to learn.

What makes this habit hard to break is that phones are built to keep people coming back. Apps send notifications and update all the time. For teenagers, ignoring these signals can feel almost compulsive, like something they cannot control. Many young people say they want to put their phone down but pick it up again without really thinking about it. This is not just about willpower. It is about how these apps are designed to hold attention.

Some schools and families have started setting simple rules, such as no phones in bedrooms after a certain hour. Teenagers who sleep better tend to feel calmer and do better in school. Small changes like charging a phone in another room or reading before bed can already help a lot. The goal is not to take technology away from young people. It is to make sure it does not take over the parts of life that matter most.

Question 31: Which of the following is FALSE according to the passage?

A. Screen light can make it harder for the body to rest

B. Some teenagers check their phones before going to sleep

C. Bad sleep may influence learning, mood, and memory

D. Most sleep problems in teenagers are caused by illness

Question 32: The word "compulsive" in the second paragraph is closest in meaning to _____.

A. careful B. uncontrollable C. confident D. important

Question 33: The word "calmer" in the third paragraph is OPPOSITE in meaning to _____.

A. happier B. healthier C. anxious D. creative

Question 34: According to the second paragraph, why is the habit of checking phones hard to stop?

A. Because teenagers believe that notifications provide essential daily information.

B. Because students lack the willpower to follow their parents' strict rules.

C. Because applications are engineered to keep users constantly coming back.

D. Because teenagers are afraid of missing out on important social updates.

Question 35: What can be inferred about the author's view on technology usage?

A. Digital devices should be completely prohibited from teenagers' daily lives.

B. Technological tools are the primary cause of all modern teenage illnesses.

C. Using technology intentionally is better than letting it dominate one's life.

D. Schools should be solely responsible for managing teenagers' screen time.

Question 36: Which of the following best summarises the main content of the passage?

LIVEWORKSHEETS

A. The scientific reasons why artificial light from screens causes physical illness.

B. The impact of smartphone habits on sleep and strategies for healthier balance.

C. The psychological pressure that teenagers face from using social media apps.

D. The role of schools in teaching students how to manage their digital devices.

Four phrases/sentences have been removed from the text below. For each question, mark the letter A, B, C or D on your answer sheet to indicate the correct option that best fits each of the numbered blanks from 37 to 40.

Every culture has traditions that have been passed down for hundreds of years. In Vietnam, these include things like worshipping ancestors, wearing áo dài on special days, and gathering as a family during Tết. Many people believe that keeping these customs alive is important because they give people a sense of who they are (37) _____. When a tradition disappears, something quietly disappears with it too, something that cannot easily be brought back.

At the same time, not every old custom fits comfortably into modern life. Some traditional practices cost a lot of money, take many days to prepare, or ask (38) _____. In some rural communities, large wedding ceremonies can put real financial pressure on families who cannot afford them but feel they cannot say no. When a tradition causes more stress than joy, it is fair to ask whether it still serves the people who practise it.

Perhaps the answer is not a choice between keeping everything and letting everything go. Traditions can change slowly and still survive. (39) _____. A community might update a festival to be more welcoming to outsiders and still keep its meaning. (40) _____. The heart of a custom can stay alive even when the details around it change.

A. women to take on roles that younger generations find outdated

B. and where they come from

C. A family might celebrate Tết in a smaller, quieter way and still feel deeply connected to their roots

D. What matters most is not the exact form a tradition takes, but the care and intention behind it
