LIVEWORKSHEETS

III. Read the texts below and guess the meaning of the new words. Choose the correct answers.

Living in Balance

Nature works best when it is sustainable. This means using resources in a way that doesn't run out or destroy the Earth for the future. For example, if we cut down one tree but plant two more, we are keeping the forest healthy so it can last for a very long time.

1. If a way of living is 'sustainable', it means it is:

A. Able to last for a long time without running out of resources.

B. Very expensive and difficult to do.

C. Something that only happens during the summer.

The Choking Ocean

Plastic in the ocean doesn't just stay in one piece; it breaks down into tiny, microscopic bits called microplastics. These particles are so small - often smaller than a grain of rice - that they are nearly impossible to see. Unfortunately, small fish often swallow them by mistake, passing the plastic up the food chain to larger animals and even humans.

2. In the text about the ocean, what are "microplastics"?

A. Large plastic bags that float on the surface.

B. Tiny bits of plastic that are often smaller than a grain of rice.

C. A type of small fish that lives in the ocean.

Power from the Earth

To stop air pollution, many cities are moving away from coal and gas. Instead, they use geothermal energy. This power comes from the intense heat trapped deep inside the Earth. By tapping into underground steam and hot water, we can create electricity without burning anything or sending smoke into the sky.

3. What does "geothermal" energy come from?

A. The wind blowing across the plains.

B. The bright rays of the sun.

C. The intense heat trapped deep inside the Earth.

The Vanishing Ice

In the Arctic, the thick sheets of ice are beginning to recede. As the planet gets warmer, these glaciers pull back and shrink, leaving less solid ground for polar bears to hunt on. If the ice continues to move backward and melt into the ocean, the sea levels around the world will begin to rise.

4. When glaciers "recede" because of warmth, what are they doing?

A. Moving backward and shrinking.

B. Growing larger and thicker.

C. Turning into a bright blue color.

LIVEWORKSHEETS

The Last of Their Kind

When a type of animal is no longer found anywhere on Earth, we say it is extinct. This is different from being "threatened" or "rare." Once a species like the Dodo bird or the Woolly Mammoth reaches this point, they are gone forever and can never be brought back to the wild.

5. What does it mean when a species becomes "extinct"?

A. The animals have moved to a different country.

B. There are no living members of that group left on Earth.

C. The animals are very hard to find because they are hiding.
