

Exercise 1

Read the text and answer the questions.

- Where are these people from?
- What are they famous for?
- When did these people start living without money?
- Why did they decide to do so?
- Where do they live?
- What do they eat?

They live without money

Mark Boyle, also known as The Moneyless Man, is an Irish writer. Mark started living without money in November 2008 and in 2016 he stopped using modern technology. So now he lives without any money and without any gadgets. He only has his laptop to write articles, but he spends very little time working with it. Boyle writes articles for the British newspaper The Guardian and has also written some books.

Before beginning the moneyless life, Mark finished university and worked as a manager of two organic food companies and earned much money. One day Mark was talking to his friend and they agreed that money causes a disconnection between people. After that talk, he decided to live without money.

Mark got an old caravan and parked it near an organic farm. He works on the farm 3 days a week for this park place. He also grows some food on that farm. He usually eats vegetables, berries, mushrooms and nuts. Sometimes he takes waste food from local restaurants. He washes in the river and cooks outside, he doesn't have any money, but he loves his life and he has many fans.