LEAD-IN

- 01 Discuss these questions with a partner.
- 1 What was the last thing you bought that you could describe as good value for money?
  - 2 Describe something expensive that you had to save up to buy.
  - 3 Why do some people prefer physical money to debit or credit cards?
  - 4 Do you think that in the future we will live without physical money?
  - 5 What is the safest way to protect your money?

SHORT-ANSWER QUESTIONS

USING THE QUESTIONS TO HELP YOU FOLLOW A TALK

- 02 Look at the 'short-answer questions'. What do the questions tell you about the content and organisation of the lecturer's talk?
- 1 What were used as an ancient type of currency for trade?
  - 2 What were the first coins made in Greece a natural mixture of?
  - 3 Which material did the Chinese use in the seventh century BC to make coins?
  - 4 What did most early Chinese coins resemble?
  - 5 What distinguished the coins of the first emperor of China, Shi Huangdi, apart from being circular?
  - 6 According to historians, what was the purpose of the round jade discs that Shi Huangdi's coins were based on?
  - 7 Which aspect of previous Chinese coins was not kept for Shi Huangdi's coins?
  - 8 Which industrial process can Shi Huangdi's coin-making be seen as a primitive example of?

- 03 Look at the first four questions from the exam task. What do the underlined words tell you about the answer you will need to listen for?

- 1 What were used as an ancient type of currency for trade?
- 2 What were the first coins made in Greece a natural mixture of?
- 3 Which material did the Chinese use in the seventh century BC to make coins?
- 4 What did most early Chinese coins resemble?

- 04 With a partner, think of possible answers you might hear in the recording for these questions.

- 1 What were used as an ancient type of currency for trade?
leathers, cows or sheep, crops, beads, etc.
- 2 What were the first coins made in Greece a natural mixture of?
- 3 Which material did the Chinese use in the seventh century BC to make coins?
- 4 What did most early Chinese coins resemble?

- 05 Using your ideas for 1–4 above, for each question write a possible sentence that you might hear in the recording that gives the answer and paraphrases the words in the question. The first one has been done for you.

- 1 What were used as an ancient type of currency for trade?
Thousands of years ago, leathers were used as a means of payment.
- 2 What were the first coins made in Greece a natural mixture of?
- 3 Which material did the Chinese use in the seventh century BC to make coins?
- 4 What did most early Chinese coins resemble?

01 This task asks you to answer WH-questions using a given word limit. The questions will be in the order in which they are referred to in the recording and must be answered using the exact words from the recording.

TIP 02

As the questions follow the order of the information in the recording, read them through before you begin, as this will help you understand the structure of the recording.

TIP 04

It can be helpful to try to predict what the answers will be, but remember that your answer must use the same words that you hear on the recording.

TIP 05

The questions use words that paraphrase what is said in the recording, so it can help if you think of other ways the questions could be worded.

- 06 Listen to the first part of the lecture and answer questions 1–4 above. Use NO MORE THAN THREE WORDS for each answer.

27

- 07 Look at the rest of the short-answer questions for this section. With a partner, discuss ways of expressing the underlined words.

- 5 What distinguished the coins of first Chinese emperor, Shi Huangdi, apart from being round in form?
- 6 According to historians, what was the purpose of the round jade discs that Shi Huangdi's coins were based on?
- 7 Which aspect of previous Chinese coins was not kept for Shi Huangdi's coins?
- 8 Which industrial process can Shi Huangdi's coin-making be seen as a primitive example of?

- 08 Listen to the second part of the lecture and answer questions 5–8 above. Use NO MORE THAN TWO WORDS for each answer.

DIAGRAM LABELLING

This task requires you to listen and complete the labels on a diagram, either by choosing from a list or, as in sentence completion tasks, by keeping to a word limit, normally a maximum of two words. In this section we will practise the latter. Use similar strategies to those for short-answer questions.

TIP 09

You will only be expected to complete and correctly spell a label with a technical term if the word(s) is/are similar to a recognisable homograph, i.e. a word with the same spelling but a different meaning.

- 09 Look at the diagram and try to predict what kind of word is missing from each gap.

Label the diagram below. Write NO MORE THAN TWO WORDS AND/OR A NUMBER for each answer.

3D crown gives 4 _____ when tilted

Polymer note is 1 _____ smaller than previous one.

2 _____ with three images

3 _____ containing a hologram

Number 5 revealed by 5 _____ light

10 Listen to this new part of the lecture on the same topic and answer questions 1-5.

29

11 Look at a candidate's answers to questions 1-5. Why would each one be marked incorrect?

- 1 15
- 2 see through window
- 3 silver patch
- 4 effect
- 5 UV ultra-violet light

TIP 10

Make sure you are clear on how to express numbers in all forms as they can come up in this task. Also remember that words connected by a hyphen (-) count as one word and that you will lose the mark if you make a spelling mistake.

EXAM SKILLS

12 Listen and answer questions 1-10.

30

Questions 1-5

Answer the questions below.

Write NO MORE THAN TWO WORDS AND/OR A NUMBER for each answer.

- 2 What did the ancient Egyptians invent in order to protect their wealth?
- 3 After which year was the dead bolt lock created?
- 4 What did the Romans add to Egyptian lock designs?
- 5 What made Roman locks more difficult to break open than Egyptian locks?

Questions 6-10

Label the diagram below.

Write NO MORE THAN TWO WORDS AND/OR A NUMBER for each answer.

Reading - 1

Pre-reading

- A. Tell the class about a teacher that made a strong impression on you, either in a positive or negative way. What qualities do you think make a good teacher?

In fine voice - the stress of teaching

Confidence, presentation and communication skills are recognised weapons in most teachers' armouries, but few would consider the voice to be their most prized asset. The teacher's voice is in constant use, but unlike other professional voice users, such as actors and singers, many receive little training in how to look after it. If Pavarotti has a sore throat, he can cancel the show. Teachers are expected to struggle on, accepting husky voices as an occupational hazard. But putting the voice under continual strain can lead to long-lasting damage.

At Harvard University School of Education, voice training for student teachers is a priority. "Teaching is about communication, and the voice is the main tool of communication," says James Williams, teacher training convenor in the School of Education. "Not training teachers about voice skills would be like training a surgeon to do an operation without explaining the tools or instruments to use."

Trainees at Harvard are given two sessions on voice and self-presentation run by the voice specialist Julie Stanford, during their induction period in the first two weeks of the course. School mentors are made aware of the voice training and asked to refer student teachers who need help with voice and self-presentation to Stanford. Trainees who would like further help with their voice can attend a series of voluntary workshops on voice care.

"Teachers are very bad at seeing themselves as professional voice users," says Stanford, "so we make it clear to the students from the outset. The message is very simple: if there's no voice, there's no job." During training, students learn about the anatomy of the voice and voice care. There is also input on pitch, pace and effective intonation in the classroom context. Accent is another key topic - not the elimination of accent, but how students can communicate clearly in the classroom without accent or dialect getting in the way. Student teachers are asked to prepare a three-minute individual presentation for their peers, which is filmed, providing opportunities for self-evaluation.

Students also receive feedback from Stanford.

An increasing number of teacher training providers are recognising the need to offer voice training, but for more experienced teachers, bad habits may already be ingrained. According to Jack Denning, coordinator of the Voice Care Network, a charitable organisation that provides support and information for teachers, many lack knowledge about how to protect their most valuable asset. "The muscles in the voice are affected by stress and emotion," says Denning. "Teaching is a very stressful job, so you can imagine the impact on the voice. Unfortunately, lack of knowledge about voice care means that many teachers abuse their voices without even realising it."

Bad habits include throat clearing, which pushes the vocal chords together; failure to drink enough water; talking too quickly, which can affect breathing; and speaking in too high or deep a pitch. Trainee teachers are made aware of the signs of vocal stress and how to avoid it. A persistent tickly cough, hoarse throat, tenderness or a noticeable change in vocal quality are all danger signs that shouldn't be ignored. And Denning believes teachers can avoid vocal stress by making use of non-verbal signals to attract students' attention.

Environmental factors also have a part to play. "I have often wondered how much thought goes into the acoustic design of classrooms when refurbishments are carried out or new schools are built," says Denning. "It is a key factor when building a theatre. It should also be a key factor when designing a school."

Beating the Playground Blues

For most young pupils, playground spats and scuffles are all part of growing up. But at one school, potentially explosive situations are defused by patrols of a select group of children, sometimes as young as six, wearing badges and red caps bearing the word 'mentor'. They are trained in 'anger management and conflict resolution' and, under the 'peer mediation scheme', they also stop bullying among the pupils - who include children as young as three.

The scheme at St Ann's school - the brainchild of headteacher Samantha Murray - is being introduced to another six schools in the same area, after its success there.

"I'd hate people to think this is a namby-pamby scheme and that we don't believe in reprimanding our students," she said yesterday. "But this has a far longer-lasting effect on children." The mentors help children to walk away from arguments and fights while breathing techniques are also used to deal with anger. Mrs Murray said, "As soon as children get really cross with each other, the mentor appears and says, 'Would you like to talk about it?'" Children listen better to their friends than teachers sometimes.

The 22 mentors are chosen by staff each year from volunteers aged six to eleven. They meet once a week for an hour-long session about anger management, conflict resolution and problem-solving. The youngsters are shown how to mediate and they act out scenarios which might need their involvement. One technique is called SARAH and teaches pupils how to deal with angry pupils. It consists of five steps: Stop talking; Activate listening; Repeat back what is said to you; Accept feelings of others; and Help others to make choices.

At break times, the mentors are on hand to break up or stop fights and console bullied children. Unhappy or angry pupils can go to the Friendship Stop - a bench in the playground where mentors give advice or counselling. There is also a Peace Patrol of a dozen pupils who wear green caps and act as prefects to keep order. "This is a violent area and children are used to witnessing quite a lot of violence," said Mrs Murray. "We were concerned that sometimes this spilled into the playground. The school is also in a deprived area. A lot of the children don't have good role models at home. Fighting was a problem for all age groups so we wanted a bottom-up approach for children to take control of their own anger management. It's about giving them opportunities and techniques to become part of a group and make friends."

The headteacher, who has a diploma in pastoral care and counselling in schools, added: "Since we introduced the scheme three years ago, discipline at the school has really improved. I have not had to split up a fight for ages. Before there were two or three a week. The school has a nice atmosphere because the children are happy and pleasant. We do follow other disciplinary methods as well but there has to be an element of children taking charge of themselves."

The scheme's expansion is being funded by a $40,000 grant from the Children's Fund and New Deal for Communities.

The Irish Education System

In Ireland, it is not compulsory for children to take part in pre-primary education. Nonetheless, many parents choose to send their children to private institutes for this purpose at around the age of three or four. The state, however, does not stipulate exactly what children should be taught in these schools, nor is there any particular official state-sanctioned body which oversees what goes on in them.

All children must enrol in primary level education though. Most do so from about the age of four or five, and once children reach six years of age, the state obliges parents to enrol them if they haven't already been enrolled. In Ireland, it is compulsory to remain in education until you are sixteen; effective therefore, every single young person must go through the primary school system. Primary school is made up of eight separate grades; junior and senior infants, and first to sixth class.

Once a student has finished sixth class, he then transfers into a secondary school. Secondary school is comprised of the Junior Cycle (after completion of which students sit their first major exam - the Junior Certificate), Transition Year, and the Senior Cycle. Transition year is a relatively new programme introduced by the department of education. It allows students to have a 'light' year, academically speaking, between the exam-oriented Junior and Senior cycles. During Transition Year, emphasis is put on extra-curricular activities and students are given the chance to learn new skills. Despite its popularity with both students and teachers, Transition Year remains optional; some schools choose to run the programme and others bypass it moving straight into the Senior Cycle instead. The Senior Cycle is extremely important for students because they sit their final school exam at the end of it: this is known as the Leaving Certificate. A student's performance in this exam will determine whether or not they will get accepted into university to study the course of their choice. Students can study as many subjects as they want during the two years of the Senior Cycle; however, only six will count towards their aggregate points score in the assessment system for college entry. Students rarely study more than seven subjects given the challenging nature of the curriculum.

School-leavers, typically aged between 17 and 19, must then decide whether or not to go into third-level study. For those who decide they wish to, and who are lucky enough to fulfill the entry requirements of their chosen course, higher education is, ostensibly, free. That said, in reality, the registration fees charged by universities and colleges today are so expensive that students are effectively paying college entrance fees, just by another name. Unlike in the other levels of the education system (where the option to enrol in a school is determined by its proximity to where you live) students may study in the location of their choice, whether it be near or far away.

A. Match each statement, A - L, to the appropriate level within the education system. The first one is done for you as an example.

- (A) Attendance is not mandatory though many young children are sent here.
- (B) There is no restriction imposed on the location of one's place of study at this level.
- (C) This is the only level which is compulsory for everyone to complete.
- (D) There is no limit on the number of exam subjects a student may study, but results will only count in a set number of subjects.
- (E) Entry into courses at this level is determined on the basis of the results of a final examination at the previous level of study.
- (F) The syllabus is not determined by the state or regulated by any official body.
- (G) Attendance is mandatory for all children who reach a certain age.
- (H) Students effectively pay for their education at this level, despite the fact that it is supposed to be free.
- (I) Students spend more years of their education attending school at this level than any other.
- (J) There are no state-run or state-sponsored institutions operating at this level.
- (K) This level is divided into three different phases, one of which is optional.
- (L) Attendance is compulsory, but only up to a certain age.
