3. READ THE FOLLOWING TEXT AND ANSWER THE QUESTIONS.

Have you ever watched the movie Titanic? You sure have heard about the enormous vessel whose attempt to cross the Atlantic Ocean in record time failed terribly on the early morning of April 15, 1912. The story of the shipwreck has remained in our collective memory as the number one tragedy in the history of maritime transportation.

Since the shipwreck was found in 1985, it has delighted many scientists and researchers around the world, but not only them, a good number of fortune hunters have made their way to the spot where the wreck lies at a depth of about 3000 meters, and hard to believe as it is, they have reached the remains of the ship more than once.

For decades, the wreck has been explored and many objects have been retrieved from it with the purpose of studying and later displaying them in museums, but sadly many others have been illegally extracted and sold by plunderers to private collectors, thereby hindering researchers from fully understanding the exact cause and mechanics of the ship's sinking, as well as its history, this is why we haven't understood many aspects of the shipwreck yet.

Many mysteries still haven't been solved, but each year new data is recorded and studied by scientists, for example, for many years, people believed that the ship broke in half when the hull impacted the seafloor, but recent studies have already proved that in fact the ship broke in half while it nose-dived at a nearly 60 degree angle, studies and 3D models have shown that such unusual position, resulted in a lot of stress in the middle part of the vessel which it could not tolerate and therefore ended up breaking it in half.

In spite of the fact that the film starred by Leonardo DiCaprio and Kate Winslet depicts a more dramatic and embellished version of what happened that night, some parts are actually accurate, nonetheless some aspects of the story will remain a mystery for the years to come.
