Read the text below. Two college students share their opinions.

Anna (19 years old, from a small village):

"I love the fresh air and nature. I can see stars at night, not just buildings. People here know each other, so I feel safe. However, finding a job is hard. Most of my friends moved to the city. Also, if you need a doctor or a big supermarket, you have to drive 40 minutes. It's beautiful but sometimes boring for young people."

Mark (20 years old, moved from the city to a village):

"I moved here six months ago. The best part is the low cost of living — rent is cheap, and I grow my own vegetables. I am less stressed now. But I miss nightlife, cinemas, and fast delivery. Also, my commute to college takes two hours each way. It's a trade-off."
