Kangaroos are fascinating animals that live in Australia. They belong to a group of animals called marsupials. This means that the mother kangaroo carries her baby, called a joey, in a special pouch (túi) on her stomach. Kangaroos have very strong back legs and large feet, which help them jump very far and fast. They use their long, heavy tails for balance when they are jumping. Kangaroos are herbivores, which means they only eat plants like grass and leaves. They can survive for a long time without drinking water because they get moisture from their food.

Questions:

1. Where do kangaroos live?

   A. In America B. In Australia C. In Africa D. In Asia

2. What is a baby kangaroo called?

   A. A marsupial B. A pouch C. A joey D. A herbivore

3. What helps kangaroos jump far and fast?

   A. Their long tail B. Their strong back legs

   C. Their pouch D. Their short arms

4. Why don't kangaroos need to drink water often?

   A. Because they don't like water.

   B. Because they sleep all day.

   C. Because they eat a lot of meat.

   D. Because they get water from the plants they eat.
