

Diary Entry with Mistakes

Instructions: Belly's diary entry contains 10 mistakes involving adjectives, adverbs, comparatives, and superlatives. Listen, identify the mistakes and correct them.

August 31st

Tonight feels strange. The beach looked more beautifully than it ever had before, and the waves moved calm across the shore. Conrad seemed more quieter than usual, but somehow I understood him easy. We sat together and watched the sunset, which was the most perfectest one I had ever seen.

Jeremiah, as always, laughed happy at almost everything. He seemed more relaxed than anyone else, though I knew he was feeling things just as deeply. The evening passed more quick than I wanted it to, and the air became more warmer as darkness settled over Cousins.

Looking back now, it was the most unforgettable summer of my life. I felt more happier than I had in years, and for the first time everything seemed realer than a dream. The stars shone brightlyer than usual, as if they were trying to make the night last a little longer.

Maybe summers always end too soon, but this one ended more gentle than I expected.

August 31st

Tonight feels strange. The beach looked _____ than it ever had before, and the waves moved _____ across the shore. Conrad seemed _____ than usual, but somehow I understood him _____. We sat together and watched the sunset, which was _____ one I had ever seen.

Jeremiah, as always, laughed _____ at almost everything. He seemed _____ than anyone else, though I knew he was feeling things just as deeply. The evening passed _____ than I wanted it to, and the air became _____ as darkness settled over Cousins.

Looking back now, it was _____ summer of my life. I felt _____ than I had in years, and for the first time everything seemed _____ than a dream. The stars shone _____ than usual, as if they were trying to make the night last a little longer.

Maybe summers always end too soon, but this one ended _____ than I expected.

August 31st

Tonight feels strange. The beach looked more beautiful than it ever had before, and the waves moved calmly across the shore. Conrad seemed quieter than usual, but somehow I understood him easily. We sat together and watched the sunset, which was the most perfect one I had ever seen.

Jeremiah, as always, laughed happily at almost everything. He seemed more relaxed than anyone else, though I knew he was feeling things just as deeply. The evening passed more quickly than I wanted it to, and the air became warmer as darkness settled over Cousins.

Looking back now, it was the most unforgettable summer of my life. I felt happier than I had in years, and for the first time everything seemed more real than a dream. The stars shone more brightly than usual, as if they were trying to make the night last a little longer.

Maybe summers always end too soon, but this one ended more gently than I expected.