A Tourist in Rimac District

Last Saturday, Emma visited the district of Rimac with her cousin Diego. They wanted to explore historical places and learn more about Lima's culture.

First, they walked near the "Alameda de los Descalzos". Emma noticed many old houses, colorful streets, and traditional food stands. She felt excited because the district was very different from modern places in Lima.

Later, they visited a small museum. A tour guide explained the history of Rímac district and showed old photographs. Emma learned that many tourists visit the district every year because it is one of the oldest areas in Lima.

At noon, Emma and Diego ate traditional food in a local restaurant. The food was delicious and inexpensive. Emma especially liked the "anticuchos".

In the afternoon, they climbed a viewpoint near San Cristóbal hill. From there, Emma could see many parts of the city. She took several photos and shared them on social media.

Before going home, Emma said: "Rimac is an interesting place with history, culture, and friendly people. I want to come back again."
