One major distraction is social media. Many teenagers spend hours checking updates on their phones. To deal with this, they must turn off their devices when they start studying. If they sign out of their accounts, they can concentrate on their homework much better. Moreover, keeping a quiet study space is very important. If there is too much noise, they should go to the school library. Students should also remember to take a short break after

Active Ways to Reduce Stress

Stress is a common issue for many high school students, especially during exam seasons. If they do not find ways to reduce stress, their mental health will suffer. Fortunately, there are many active ways to manage and overcome anxiety. One of the most effective methods is regular physical exercise. Doing sports or working out at the school gym can release chemicals that improve mood. If students do not like heavy exercise, they can simply go for a walk in a quiet park. This allows them to relax and gives their brain a break from study.

Another way to reduce stress is to maintain a well-balanced lifestyle. Students should divide their time between studying and relaxing. They should not delay their homework or leave it until the last minute. Working on tasks early helps them avoid the pressure of deadlines. They should also communicate with their parents or consult a counsellor if they feel overwhelmed. Sharing their feelings can help them feel more optimistic and bring them happiness. Ultimately, taking care of both physical and mental health is the key to overcoming school stress.
