For many people, travelling alone can seem intimidating. However, it is becoming increasingly popular among young adults who want to gain independence and confidence. Emily, a 24-year-old university graduate, decided to spend three weeks travelling across Europe on her own after finishing her studies.

Although her parents were worried about her safety, Emily carefully planned her trip and booked accommodation in advance. During her journey, she visited six different countries and met people from all over the world. One of the most memorable moments occurred while she was travelling by train from Germany to Austria. Due to a technical problem, the train was delayed for several hours. As a result, she missed her connection and had to spend the night in a city she had never visited before.

At first, Emily felt frustrated and anxious. Nevertheless, she decided to make the most of the situation. She explored the city centre, tried local food, and even joined a walking tour organized by other travellers. By the end of the evening, she had made several new friends and discovered places that were not included in her original itinerary.

Looking back, Emily believes that the unexpected delay was actually one of the highlights of her trip. Since returning home, she has encouraged many of her friends to travel independently, explaining that unexpected situations often create the best memories.
