 READING

1 Read the texts about teenagers and money.

A Do you have a part-time job?

The number of teens doing part-time jobs to get extra money is smaller than ever before. Teenagers say that they don't have the time to do part-time jobs because there's a lot of pressure on them to do well at school, get to university and then find a good job.

Most parents give their children some money every week, and some give them extra for helping with small jobs at home. But is that enough for the clothes, smartphones and entertainment they want? Learning how to make and save money to buy the things they really want is as important as anything they learn at school. This means more than shopping around for a better price or waiting for the sales when things are cheaper. Both are a good start, but a job is better.

B Where do teens spend their money?

A new study has shown that these are the items teenagers buy the most:

Clothes

Clothes and shoes are number one on the list, and have been for a long time.

Entertainment

As well as music, this includes computer games and going to the cinema, concerts, etc.

Food and drink

Having lunch or going for coffee with friends. Also, soft drinks, sweets and snacks are important.

Jewellery

Popular with teenage girls, but quite a lot of boys also spend money on it.

C

Money tips

We spoke to Jill who has a website giving advice to teens about money.

Int: So, Jill, what you do is tell teens about the best places to shop, right?

Jill: Yes, I talk about where to get the cheapest clothes, jewellery and so on.

Int: Do you mean buying things in the sales?

Jill: Yes. Most people know that it's best to buy things in the sales. However, many people want things now, so they don't want to wait.

Int: What other advice do you give?

Jill: I also give advice about how to save money for the future and where to find jobs to get some extra money.

Int: It sounds like useful advice. Thanks for talking to us.

Jill: My pleasure!
