

Antigens are the molecules ..... the surface of the pathogens. They are often injected ..... the body. As ..... as they enter the body, they mimic the ..... disease and trigger an immune ..... response. This immune ..... response creates ..... to fight the antigens. Then the body develops memory cells to memorize the ..... After the secondary encounter, the immune system can respond ..... and more effectively to the pathogens.