

Reading Passage

Maya is a 24-year-old nature photographer from Toronto. Every morning, she wakes up at 5:30 AM to catch the early sunlight. She packs her camera equipment, drinks a cup of black coffee, and walks to the city park. Maya loves taking photos of wild birds and old trees.

Last summer, Maya traveled to Costa Rica to take pictures of exotic animals in the rainforest. She stayed in a small wooden cabin near the coast for two weeks. While hiking, she spotted red frogs, colorful parrots, and even a slow-moving sloth. She posted her best photographs on her blog, and thousands of people liked her work. In the future, Maya hopes to publish her own photography book to inspire young people to protect nature.
