

Good morning, everyone. Today, I want to talk about my favorite summer memory.

Last June, my family went to Da Nang for three days.

We went to My Khe Beach. The water was clear and the sand was soft.

I swam in the sea, played volleyball, and ate yummy food with my family.

My favorite activity was surfing.

It was a wonderful trip. Thank you for listening.

Good morning, everyone.

Today, I want to share my summer memory.

Last summer, I stayed with my grandparents in the countryside.

In the morning, I helped my grandfather feed the animals.

In the afternoon, I rode my bike with my cousins.

I was very happy. This trip taught me that happiness comes from simple moments with family.

Thank you for listening.

I joined an English camp last summer.

Speaking English was difficult for me at first because I was afraid of making mistakes.

Through group games, a short play, and a presentation, I became more confident.

My teammates always listened and helped me.

I also met students from other schools.

The camp taught me that mistakes are a normal part of learning, so we should be brave and keep trying.

Many people think a good summer needs a long trip, but I had a meaningful summer at home.

I made a plan to read books, practice swimming, and learn to cook.

Every day, I read and went swimming several times a week.

On weekends, my mother taught me to cook simple dishes.

I also played games and met my friends.

By the end of the summer, I achieved my goals.

I learned to use my time wisely.
