The Studio School

John Black was bored at his old school. But at the Studio School in New York, John feels good. In his old school, he always listened to instructions from teachers. But in his new school, teenagers work on interesting projects as a team. There aren't many students in each class, so teachers can focus on each student. The teachers say that their students feel excited about learning at the Studio School.

A school for girls

Kakenya Ntaiya comes from Enosaaen, a small village in Kenya. Many girls don't go to school in Kenya. They get married very young and have children. But Kakenya wanted an education. She went to school and worked very hard. She then went to university in the USA, but she never forgot her village. She wanted all the girls in her village to be able to do what she did. So Kakenya went back to Kenya and built a school for girls there.

Tinkering School

The Tinkering School in San Francisco is a summer school for children and teenagers. The students stay at the school for five days. They feed the animals on a farm there and eat good food. They work on projects in teams. Past projects include building a rollercoaster, building a tree house and making boats. The students solved problems by working together to make these things. The school environment is often outdoors which makes it even more fun.
