CONCLUDING SENTENCE

In addition, international participation helps Viet Nam strengthen relationships with other countries and promote trade and tourism.

First, international cooperation creates more opportunities for Vietnamese students to study, exchange ideas and learn about other cultures.

Second, organisations can support education, health and community development through useful programmes and professional expertise.

Finally, by joining international activities, Viet Nam can share its own experiences and contribute to solving common regional and global problems.

Viet Nam gains several important benefits from participating in international organisations.

For these reasons, active participation in international organisations is valuable for the country's development and international integration.
