The Story of Anja

In a village at the foot of Mount Meratus, in Indonesia, there lived a woman who was waiting for her to return home. It was already nighttime, but he was still nowhere to be seen. Finally, close to midnight, the wife heard her husband's footsteps. Relief washed over her as he entered the house. They sat together while he drank his coffee.

"Where have you been?" the wife asked. "It's so late!"

"I was helping your parents climb at their house," he replied

"How are they?" the wife continued. "Are they healthy?"

"Well in there, there was a disaster," he replied.

The wife, shocked, asked, "What kind of disaster?"

The husband didn't want to tell about it now, so he said, "It's better if we just go straight there, let's go."

Both of them then there in the middle of the night because it's far away. The wife felt scared and curious about what happened to her parents. While walking, the husband sang a verse along the way. He sang, "The moon shines dimly as the spirits of the dead walk at night"

"Tarang bulan salau-salau anja mati bajalan malam~"

After they arrived at her parents' house, lots of people had gathered.

The husband told his wife to go in first.

On the porch, her parents said to the wife, "Thankfully you come fast, where is your sister that I've told to pick you up?"

The wife was confused, "She come, I came here with my husband,"

The people there were surprised because she said she just came here with her husband.

Then everyone her to go inside. After entering the house, the wife was shocked because her husband, who was lying down, was no longer alive.

Apparently that afternoon, when the husband was helping them climb the coconut tree, he fell. Then he died before midnight while being treated and while they waited for his wife to come.
