Last August 17th, I had a great time celebrating Indonesia's Independence Day. I woke up very early because I didn't want to miss anything.

First, I watched the flag raising ceremony at the Presidential Palace on television. It made me feel very proud. After that, my mother cooked a special breakfast for us, including mini yellow rice (tumpeng).

In the afternoon, I went to the field near my house. Many neighbors were there for the traditional games. I registered for two competitions: the sack race (balap karung) and the cracker eating contest (lomba makan kerupuk). I didn't win the cracker eating contest, but I won first place in the sack race! It was very funny and exciting.

By late afternoon, I went home. I was tired, but I was so happy and had many good memories of the day.

Independence Day Celebration

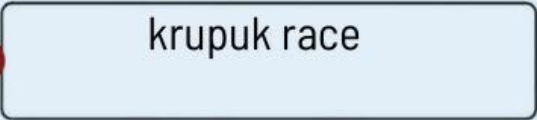

Today, my school held an Independence Day celebration. Students from every grade joined fun games, such as the marble-in-spoon race, sack race, tandem race, and krupuk race.

First, I joined the marble-in-spoon race with Galang. He came first, and I came second. Then, I joined the sack race. I ran as fast as I could, but Andre came first, and I came second. Meanwhile, Pipit joined the tandem race with her friends, and her team came third.

Finally, I joined the krupuk race. I met Galang again in the final, and this time, I came first.

It was a joyful day at my school. I was delighted, and my class became the grand champion.
