Gen Z vs. Grandma: Who Catches On Faster?

MIND MAP FOR THE QUESTIONS

1 Who in your family is from a different generation?

Answer My elderly paternal grandparents and my middle-aged aunt are from different generations.

Detail My great-grandmother's birth name was Lan, and she tells amusing stories about her childhood.

Impact Her stories intrigue me and show how life changes from childhood to adulthood.

2 What is one thing young people understand quickly, but elderly people may not catch on to?

Answer Young people often catch on to new apps, online trends and internet slang quickly.

Detail Elderly relatives may say, 'Hang on a minute,' because the technology feels unfamiliar.

Impact In this circumstance, a little patience can help everyone learn.

3 What is one thing your grandparents understand better because of their childhood or adulthood?

Answer My grandparents understand saving money and caring for young children very well.

Detail My grandmother looked after several relatives when they were toddlers and also sang in a choir.

Impact Because of this experience, she gives useful advice and keeps an eye on the younger children.

Gen Z vs. Grandma: Who Catches On Faster?

4 Have you or your relatives ever fallen for something funny or confusing online?

Answer One of my relatives once fell for an amusing fake story online.

Detail By the way, the story claimed that a famous singer had joined our local choir.

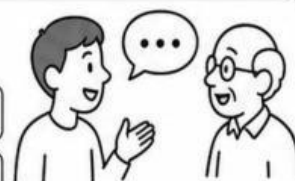

Impact We laughed, but it taught us to check information before sharing it.

5 How can different generations catch up and understand each other better?

Answer Different generations can catch up by spending time together and asking questions.

Detail Young people can explain technology, while elderly people can share lessons from adulthood.

Impact This helps relatives understand one another and prevents small differences from becoming problems.
