Meeting Types

Knowing the types of meetings a manager can host will help set your team up for success. Effective meeting management can help increase engagement and collaboration across the team. Instead of being a draining recurring activity, an effective meeting can be a unique opportunity to gather ideas, provide input, entice professional growth, and move organizational objectives forward. Before choosing the right type of meeting for your team be sure to consider these meeting elements:

- 1. Purpose: What is the goal of the meeting?
- 2. Participants: Who should attend and who will lead the meeting?
- 3. Agenda: What topics need to be discussed and in what order?
- 4. Outcome: What do you hope to accomplish by the end of the meeting?
- 5. Frequency: How often should the meeting take place?

Once you have considered these elements, it's time to choose the best type of meeting for your team's needs.

1. Onboarding meetings

Onboarding meetings are the first meeting between employees and their managers once they join the organization. This type of kick-off meeting signifies the start of their training and is necessary to have as the employee onboarding period lays the groundwork for the success of a new team member as it's their first deep dive into the company's processes and systems. These meetings should help managers get to know their employees and build relationships. Asking ice breaker questions, such as, what are your hobbies, what is your favorite dish, or other interpersonal questions, like, how do you prefer to receive feedback, or what motivates you, are best practices for these meetings.

2. One-on-one meetings

A one-on-one meeting is between two people, generally a manager and their direct report. They are one of the most effective ways for managers to build relationships and trust with their direct reports.

3. Check-in meetings

Check-in meetings—also referred to as status update meetings—are discussions where teams collaborate and share progress on a specific topic or project. The objective is to ensure alignment in the team and project while raising blockers inhibiting progress.

4. Brainstorming meetings

A brainstorming meeting is when a team meets to generate ideas on a specific topic. Brainstorming sessions can happen synchronously or asynchronously. In an async context, you'll need to ensure remote team communication and collaboration tools are available to your meeting participants.

5. All-hands meetings

All-hands meeting implies that all levels of the organization will join the meeting, including individual contributors, team leads, department heads, and c-suite executives. The goal is to sync the entire company with relevant updates, such as department-specific updates or changes in company policies.

6. Decision-making meetings

A decision-making meeting is when a team meetings to formalize a decision and iterate the next steps. These meetings will generally be used for significant decision-making that requires a commitment and potentially a new direction.

7. Problem-solving meetings

Problem-solving meetings will generally be held between someone facing a challenge and a manager or leader. Depending on the nature of the problem, this meeting can include a representative of different departments, such as a representative from HR or the legal team. The goal of a problem-solving meeting is to either find a solution to an obstacle or explore next-step possibilities.

8. Quarterly planning meetings

Quarterly planning is the strategic implementation of a year plan broken into four quarters. Every quarter, a revised goal is set for the following three months. These updated goals can be communicated in a quarterly planning meeting where there is a discuss strategic plans and a celebration of the past 90-day achievements.

9. Board meetings

A board meeting is a formal meeting with the entire board of directors of a given organization. These formal meetings are held at various intervals, such as quarterly or yearly, to discuss reoccurring and significant issues, such as policy issues, legal business or KPI reporting, or miscellaneous issues.

Grammar SpotHow to make polite requests

A request is when we ask someone for something.

Since we are asking someone for help, it is important to be polite.

We must avoid being too direct.

Here are examples of being too direct:

“I want help.”

“Pass me the salt.”

“Can you carry my bag?”

These questions are all correct English but they are too direct. These are not polite requests. They are in fact quite rude. People will be offended because they will think that you are giving them orders

- Asking to do things – asking for permission

There are many different ways of making polite requests in English.]Requests in English are usually made in the form of questions

Asking	Saying Yes	Saying No
Can I...?	Yes, sure	Well, I'm afraid...+ reason
Could I...? Could I possibly...? Is it all right if I...? Do you think I could...?	Yes, of course. Yes, that's fine. Certainly.	Well, the problem is...
Do you mind if I...?	No, not at all. No, of course not.	Sorry, but...

- Asking others to do things – making requests

Asking	Saying Yes	Saying No
Can you...?	Yes, sure.	Well, I'm afraid + reason
Could you...? Is it all right if you...? Do you think you could...? Will you...? Would you...?	Yes, of course. Certainly.	Well, the problem is Sorry, but...
Do you mind -ing...? Would you mind -ing...?	No, not at all. Of course not.

Remember that 'Do you mind...?' and 'Would you mind...?' mean 'Is it a problem for you?' so the polite answer when we 'say yes' is 'No'.

Q: Choose the correct alternative for the following:

1- (Could - Would - Would you mind) I borrow a pen, please?

- 2- 'I've forgotten my wallet.' - Don't worry. I (Could - Would closing - Would you mind if) lend you some money if you like.

Dear Sir,

Suggestion Letter for Improving Services

I have been a client of your firm for the past two years, and I am writing this letter to suggest some changes to your services.

The quality of the raw materials I have been receiving for quite some time has not been of the best standard. In addition, there have been certain delays in the delivery of the raw materials, which have affected our work.

I suggest having a fixed delivery schedule for the materials, along with proper records of the materials that have been delivered and those that are yet to be delivered. I also recommend improving the quality of the materials being supplied to us.

I am sure that if you improve upon these essential points, we can build a long-lasting relationship with you and your firm. I hope you will take these suggestions positively and work on improving your services as soon as possible.

Thank you.

Yours truly,
Joseph Birla
