Three local people suggest things to do in the capital of Hungary

A Réka

You should definitely see the Chain Bridge – an old bridge over the River Danube. You could walk across it, but the best thing to do is look at it at night. That's when all the lights come on. It's extremely pretty. Actually, the best place to see it is from Buda Castle, which is on a hill near the river, or on one of the many ferries that go up and down the Danube.

B Laci

You should go to Heroes' Square. It's not exactly downtown, and I would go there using Line 1 of the city's metro. There's a large and interesting monument in the middle of the square. What's more interesting is the large park right next to the square. It's a very short walk of just a few minutes. In the park there are some cool museums that you should visit, including one all about music and its history.

C Hajnal

There is an interesting place to go shopping – the Central Market Hall. Everyone who visits Budapest should go there. On the ground level, you can find stands selling fresh food. The stands are good, but you shouldn't miss the first floor. That's where you can sit down and eat special local food in small restaurants. There are also places where you can buy traditional Hungarian clothes and other souvenirs to take home with you.
