The First Job Interview at an Auto Service Centre

Last month, Alex finished his vocational studies as an auto mechanic and started looking for his first full-time job. He found a vacancy at a local auto service centre that repairs and maintains different types of cars. The company was looking for a young mechanic who was responsible, motivated and interested in learning new things.

Alex sent his CV and received an invitation to a job interview. Before the interview, he researched the company and read the job description carefully. He also prepared answers to some common questions, such as "Why do you want this job?", "What are your strengths?" and "What experience do you have?"

On the day of the interview, Alex arrived ten minutes early. He wore clean, appropriate clothes and switched off his phone. When he entered the office, he smiled, made eye contact and greeted the manager politely.

The manager asked him about his vocational training and practical experience. Alex explained that he had worked with different car systems during his practical training. He had experience with basic diagnostics, maintenance, changing filters and checking vehicle components. He also said that he was interested in learning more about modern diagnostic equipment.

The manager then asked about Alex's strengths. Alex answered, "I am responsible, patient and careful. I like solving technical problems and I work well in a team." When asked about a weakness, Alex said that he sometimes spends too much time checking his work, but he is learning to work faster while maintaining good quality.

At the end of the interview, Alex asked, "Could you tell me more about the training opportunities for new employees?" The manager thanked him for coming and said that the company would contact him soon.

Alex left the interview feeling confident. He knew that his technical skills were important, but he also understood that good communication, positive body language and a professional attitude could make a strong impression.
