Have you ever had a sleepover? A sleepover is when you stay at a friend's house all night and go home in the morning. But did you know that you can also have a sleepover at a museum or even at a zoo, too?

The Dino Snores at the Natural History Museum in London takes place every month and is an evening and a night full of fun. Visitors must be between eight and eleven years old. They make dinosaur T-shirts and spend the night in the central hall next to a Blue Whale skeleton. All they need is a sleeping bag and a torch to go for a walk through the dark galleries.

The BedBUGS at London Zoo is the perfect sleepover for young explorers aged 7–11 years. It takes place on a few select dates throughout the year. Guests stay overnight in the BUG house with spiders and insects and wake up to the sounds of the animals! There are games, a torchlight tour, breakfast, a morning tour and free access to the Zoo for the day after your stay!
