

a. The set of rules that define how instructions must be written in a programming language

b. A computer program designed to perform tasks or provide entertainment

c. The activity of writing instructions for a computer to follow

d. The field of studying and analyzing large amounts of information

e. The process of creating instructions for a computer using a programming language

f. The technology that allows machines to perform tasks that normally require human intelligence

g. Programs and operating systems used by a computer, as opposed to physical parts

LIVEWORKSHEETS