

A Business Trip to Chicago

Mark works for a computer company in New York. Last Tuesday, he had to travel for work. He went to Chicago for a two-day meeting with a new client.

Mark woke up at 5:00 AM. He packed his laptop, two shirts, and a suit in a small black bag. He did not take a big suitcase because he was only staying for one night. He took a taxi to the airport at 6:00 AM.

His flight was at 8:00 AM. While waiting at the gate, he drank a cup of coffee and checked his emails. The plane arrived in Chicago on time at 9:30 AM local time.

From the airport, Mark took the train downtown to the hotel. He checked in, left his bag in his room, and walked to the client's office. The meeting started at 11:00 AM and went very well. That evening, the client invited Mark to dinner at a famous pizza restaurant.

On Wednesday afternoon, Mark took a taxi back to the airport and flew home to New York. He was tired, but happy the trip was a success.
