READING: INTO THE UNKNOWN

A short time after the crash, the survivors realize that waiting on the beach may not be enough. Jack believes they need information, supplies, and a way to contact rescuers.

Kate volunteers to go with him, and Charlie joins them. At first, the plan seems pretty straightforward: find part of the plane and look for anything useful. But on this island, nothing seems to go according to plan.

As they move deeper into the jungle, the weather changes and visibility becomes worse. They know they need to keep their eyes peeled. Something about the island feels wrong.

Still, Jack tries to keep a cool head. He knows that panicking will only make things worse. Kate also appears calm, although she is clearly watching everything around her.

Charlie, however, is more unpredictable. He jokes when he is nervous and sometimes seems distracted. Jack begins to wonder whether Charlie is completely on the level about why he wanted to come along.

Then they discover another section of the aircraft. This could be their big break. If they can find the cockpit and the pilot, they may finally learn where the plane crashed.

But the jungle is becoming darker. Something is moving nearby. Whatever happens next, the survivors are about to realize that the plane crash may be only the tip of the iceberg.
