E Reading

So, you want to be a writer? Well, the first step is to start writing. You don't have to write for several hours at a time, but it is important that you write something every day. You could write for between 30 minutes and 1 hour to begin with. Decide on a time and place and continue with this routine no matter what happens. Turn off the TV and your phone. Some people listen to music, but I think it is better to work in silence.

What about when you don't have any ideas? The best thing to do is to keep writing anyway. Eventually, the words will come. Look for ideas everywhere: in people, places and things. You should also read lots of books. You can learn from the way other writers create their stories.

While I was writing my first novel, I did a writing course. I found this was a great way to get the opinion of writers. I also learned about plot, setting, characters and dialogue during this course. It was a really good experience and I advise all writers to do the same.

The next step is to send your work to agents and editors. But first, make sure your work is perfect. Read it many times yourself. Then give it to a friend to check for spelling or grammar mistakes. After that, choose who you want to send it to and write a letter to them. I've written six novels, but this part is always the most terrifying. Good luck!
