Relax, have fun, and get paid!

In 2013, more than 600 people applied for a job at a hotel in Helsinki, Finland. It was a temporary job - the contract was only for 35 days - so why was it so popular? The hotel was looking for a 'professional sleeper' - someone to test each of their 35 bedrooms and to blog about staying in the hotel. The only qualification - apart from the ability to sleep! – was knowledge of Finnish and English.

It can still be seen on the hotel website. If a blogging job sounds good, but a hotel doesn't sound exciting enough, how about this? The winner, Ben Southall, was paid a salary of $110,000 to live in a luxury house on an Australian tropical island for six months.... and blog about it!

It was so successful that four years later the Australian tourist board created not one but six similar jobs. Well, what are you waiting for?
