Many people like to take pictures. They take pictures of their friends and their families. They take pictures of themselves having fun. Pictures tell stories, capture memories, and give us something to share with the people we like. From the time that cameras were first invented in the 1700's the technology used in photography has been constantly changing and improving. Old cameras were big. It took a long time to take one picture. People had to stay very still while the photographer took their picture. Over the years, cameras became smaller and faster. Now cameras are digital and even smaller. Photographic film is no longer used. Instead of having to wait for your pictures to be developed, a digital camera shows you the picture immediately. Instead of having to buy more film, there is no cost to taking more pictures digitally. Photography is now cheaper than it ever was. More people can now enjoy taking pictures and sharing them with their friends and family.
