A Nervous Flyer

The plane (0) touches down with a jarring bump that jolted up through my back and into my head. I easily (1) hear the grunts and complaints of other passengers over (2) a screeching of the wheels and the rattling (3) on the overhead compartments. The plane began to power down, (4) a roar of the engines fading to a gentle hum. I (5) have been dreaming about snakes crawling all over the plane.

I looked out (6) in the darkness. I could see the lights of the airport. I took my phone and pushed (7) a power button impatiently. I keyed in my PIN number. Why is this thing so (8) slowly? My phone finally turned on. I checked my messages. There were no messages. The plane rolled to a slow stop. I stared out the window, tapping my phone against the scratched perspex.
