

Home and abroad

After a short time living in a foreign country, I noticed conversations with locals assumed a (0) pattern. There were standard answers to the usual questions. Most questions caused little (1)– it was rather like dancing, where both partners know how to avoid (2) on each other's toes.

But, 'When are you going home?' was a question I (3) to answer, whenever I (4) my life and the direction it seemed to be (5) In the last ten years, I had lived in a dozen countries.

And I had travelled through dozens more; usually in (6) of a purpose or a person; occasionally to see the attractions.

This kind of travel is not (7) wandering, but the extensive exploration of a wide (8) of cultures. However, it doesn't allow you to put down roots. At the back of your mind, though, is the idea of home, the place you came from.

An Irish cookery school

In the last few years, a number of cookery schools have been set (0) in Ireland to promote Irish cooking. (9) such school is run by Kathleen Doyle not (10) from the centre of Dublin.

“I opened the school twelve years ago,” says Kathleen. “The school was by no means an overnight success; I found (11) necessary to work hard to build a reputation. One of my advantages was that I had problems with my own cooking. I’ve made (12) mistake that it’s possible to make, but (13) of this, I know what people do wrong from first-hand experience.”

Just (14) most cookery schools in Ireland, Kathleen initially copied the classical dishes of France and Italy and other countries (15) have a reputation for excellent food. “Now though, things are changing,” says Kathleen. “We get excellent produce from Irish farms and, (16) a result, we’re encouraging students to create unique Irish dishes.”

Running speed

Elite (0) like the Jamaican Usain Bolt have regularly been clocked running at nearly 45 kilometres per hour. Such speed would have seemed (17) not so long ago. Scientists now suggest that humans can move (18) faster than even that, perhaps as fast as 65 kilometres per hour.

CONSIDER

For years, it was assumed that simple muscle power determined human speed, but recent research suggests otherwise. The most important (19) factor appears to be how quickly the muscles can contract and thus (20) the time a runner’s foot is in contact with the ground.

LIMIT

MINIMUM

Is our athletic ability inherited? Researcher Alun Williams has (21) twenty-three inherited factors that influence sporting performance, such as the (22) use of oxygen, and strength. As world population rises, predicts Williams, the (23) of there being someone with the right genes for these twenty-three (24) will increase noticeably and thus faster runners are likely to emerge in future.
