An Unforgettable Experience

My hobby is taking photographs. I have been taking photographs since I was a child. As I grew up, I became more interested in photography. I took photography lessons and became much better at it. Five years ago, I started my job as a photographer for a wildlife magazine. Recently, I had to take photographs of wildlife in Pahang. I visited the National Park and went deep into the jungle. There were all kinds of insects and birds. After an hour of trekking, I soon came across a troop of monkeys. They were swinging from one tree branch to another.

Then, a herd of wild boars entered the area. There were two huge boars and three baby boars. I found the family of boars really cute and started to take photographs of them. As I was taking photographs, I realised that it had become quiet. The monkeys had stopped chattering and the herd of wild boars looked uneasy. Something was wrong.

Suddenly, I saw a movement among the bushes. I was shocked to see a tiger moving towards the herd. Moments later, the tiger attacked a baby boar. The other boars ran away immediately. I knew I had to stay still to avoid catching the tiger's attention. Luckily, the tiger was focused on having its meal, so I was able to quietly take photographs of it.

I waited in my spot until the tiger left. Then I started my journey back home. It was an experience I will never forget.

A Camping Adventure

During the holidays, my friends and I went on a camping adventure. It was a two-day and one-night trip. The trip involved passing through several towns before reaching our campsite at the beach. We also had to make our way back home on our own. We wanted to test out the survival skills that we had learnt from our scout training.

We started off at 8 o'clock in the morning by bicycle. We brought along food, tents, a first aid kit and most importantly, maps. Since we were travelling by bicycle, we also brought along a bicycle repair kit.

The weather was hot and sunny, but it did not stop us from cycling. After passing by Kampung Sena, we took a break at our next stop, Tembilang. We rested and had our packed lunch there before continuing our journey. Along the way, we saw lots of paddy fields and beautiful hills. We made sure to take many photographs of the wonderful scenery to show our friends and family.

We finally reached the beach in the late evening. It was a challenge to start a campfire because of the strong breeze. However, we persevered and kept on trying. We finally managed to start a fire after many tries. We gathered around the campfire and told stories over dinner. We had a great time under the starry night sky. After a filling meal, we went to sleep.

The next day, we were up first thing in the morning. We had a simple breakfast of hard-boiled eggs and bread. Then it was time to head home. All of us could not wait to get home and have a refreshing bath, so we cycled as fast as we could. We reached home safely by midday. Although we were extremely exhausted, we were all proud of ourselves for surviving the camping adventure.

A Horrible Experience

Do you like watching films? Well, I do. In fact, it is my favourite thing to do. My weekends are usually spent at the cinema with my family and friends. I especially like watching mummy films.

Mummy films remind me of Steven Jones. Steven is an actor with an interesting story.

(35)  He sent job applications to many companies but they were all rejected. So, he was overjoyed when he finally got a job as a stuntman in a mummy film.

On his first day at work, he was wrapped from head to toe in bandages. Then, he was put in an upright coffin with the lid open. (36)  He couldn't even walk to the toilet. All he could do was stand.

Next, the crew sprayed him with paint so that the bandages looked old. (37)  Lunchtime came, but none of the crew came to get him. By then, Steven was sweating and dying for a drink of water.

Filming started after lunch. One of the actors kept forgetting his lines so the filming went on and on. By the end of the afternoon, Steven was tired, thirsty, and hungry. (38)

The cast and crew had a shock when Steven suddenly fell to the ground. Moments passed but Steven stayed still on the ground. The crew then realised that he had probably fainted.

(39)  He poured cold water over Steven's face, waking him up. Steven was sent to the hospital in an ambulance.

At the hospital, Steven was given treatment for dehydration before going home. (40)  It was a horrible experience for him.

- A In his early years as an actor, he had trouble finding a job.
- B Then, they left him there for the paint to dry.
- C A man rushed over to him and tore off his bandages.
- D He was a very successful actor in many films.
- E He was wrapped so tightly that he couldn't move.
- F Ever since then, Steven has been afraid of small spaces.
- G Unfortunately, it was a very hot day.
- H He also started to feel dizzy.
