LIVEWORKSHEETS

The Amazon Rainforest is the largest rainforest in the world. The Amazon Rainforest is made up of four layers. At the very top is the emergent layer, where there are wide-leaf trees because of the abundant sunshine. Eagles, monkeys, and butterflies are common animals found in the emergent layer. Below the emergent layer lies the canopy. About 90% of the rainforest species are found in this layer, like tree frogs, snakes, and toucans. The third layer is the understorey, where ferns and shrubs grow. It provides shelter for animals like jaguars, leopards, and lizards. At the bottom is the forest floor. Since sunlight rarely reaches this area, it is extremely dark. This layer is full of organisms that eat up dead animals and plants and return the nutrients to the soil, which in turn become the food source of other species. Therefore, the life cycle in the rainforest can go on and on.

1. Which of the following is the top layer of the Amazon Rainforest?
   A. The forest floor
   B. The understorey
   C. The canopy
   D. The emergent

2. What does the word "abundant" mean?
