Daniel and the Bird House

Daniel Clark is eleven years old and lives in a village near Bristol. His house has a large garden with several old trees. Daniel enjoys watching birds, but last winter he noticed that there were fewer birds in the garden than before.

Daniel decided to make a bird house. He found some instructions in a nature magazine, but the work was not easy. His father helped him cut the wooden pieces, and Daniel joined them together. He painted the bird house green because he wanted it to look like part of the tree.

At first Daniel planned to put the house near his bedroom window. His father explained that this place was too close to the house and could be noisy. They chose a tall apple tree at the end of the garden instead.

For several days the bird house was empty. Then Daniel saw two small birds carrying dry grass inside it. He was very excited. Now he watches the birds from the kitchen window and writes about them in a notebook.

Next month Daniel's class is going to study local birds. Daniel wants to show his notes and photos to his classmates.
