A Saturday at the Edinburgh Street Festival

My name is Hannah, and I am a graphic designer from Scotland. Every year, on the second Saturday of August, my city has an amazing street festival. Thousands of visitors from different countries come to Edinburgh to enjoy live music, street theatre, and international food. Usually, the weather in Scotland is quite cold and rainy, even in summer, so people always bring warm jackets and umbrellas.

Today is Saturday, and I am at the festival with my younger brother, Liam, and his best friend, Carlos. Carlos is from Spain, so everything here is new for him. Right now, we are standing in the main square near the castle. A Scottish folk band is playing traditional music on a big stage, and lots of people are dancing in front of them. Liam loves taking photos, so he is using his new camera to take pictures of the musicians.

At the moment, we are feeling very hungry because it is half past one. There are many food stalls on the street. Liam wants Italian pizza, and Carlos is buying fish and chips for us. I don't like eating fast food very often, so I am looking for a stall with fresh vegetarian sandwiches and fruit juice. Festivals are noisy and crowded, and my feet always hurt at the end of the day, but we never miss this event!
