Is Peucang Island Family Friendly?

Inside Ujung Kulon National Park in the northwest area, there is a small tropical island with sparkling shallow water with beauty of nature surrounding it. Sometimes, even known as a lost paradise due to how to private it is. Peucang Island, named after the Javanese mouse-deer more commonly known as kancil to the Indonesian children, encompasses seashore privacy with various wildlife, often considered one of the most beautiful beaches in Indonesia. Ujung Kulon is highly regarded as the place of conservation of Javanese rhinos, so it is common to find wild animals surrounding the Peucang Strait, giving a nice natural atmosphere from the beautiful white beach the greenery of Ujung Kulon.

You can do a lot of activities on Peucang Island. You can do water-based activities like swimming in the ocean and ride speed boats around the island. You can explore the beach by walking along the shoreline on foot, passing through rocks and enjoy privacy in the midst of wildlife on the island. You can also hike around the island, enjoying the lush greenery. You can also take pictures and picnic on the beach, relaxing in the natural atmosphere.

As there is a lot of wildlife on the island, you can see many wild animals during your visit. However, it is best not to disturb or feed them, as they could annoy you back. Peucang Island is suitable for families who love exploring and seeking out adventure on the beach. However, it would be more suitable to explore with children above 12, as many wild animals could harm small children. It is also advised to use a local guide when traveling the island for safety.

The Wakatobi region is considered to be the epicenter of coral reef biodiversity. 85% of the world's coral reefs are located in the Indo-Pasific region, and as you travel either east or west from the epicenter of biodiversity, the number of species decreases. At the Western edge of the Indian Ocean, or the Eastern edge of the Pacific, you will only find about 25% of the number of species that are present at Wakatobi.

The Atlantic/Carribean region has even less diversity, less than one tenth the number of species found in the Indo-Pacific. For instance, the Atlantic/Carribean region has fewer than 70 species of corals while the Indo-Pacific has over 700 species.

The environment influences biodiversity. Coral reef ecosystems need warm, clear waters to thrive. If there's too much runoff from large rivers or urban growth nearby, the reef can be chocked by siltation or pollution. The waters must be warm, but not too warm. Below 25°C, coral growth is retarded. Above 29°C, the symbiotic algae living in the corals begins to die off and stress the corals. Depth is important, too. Very shallow waters have too much temperature fluctuation and disruptive wave and surge action. Too deep, and light is diminished, which decreases diversity. At about 20 m depth, there is plenty of light, and not much wave action, even during large storms, so more species can survive.

6. What does the text mostly tell about?
   A. Wakatobi has less coral reef biodiversity.
   B. Wakatobi has cold and clear waters.
   C. Wakatobi is located in the Atlantic region.
   D. Wakatobi is the epicenter of coral reef biodiversity.
   E. Wakatobi has fewer than 70 species of corals.

7. The main idea of the third paragraph is …
   A. The environment influences biodiversity.
   B. The waters must be warm, but not too warm.
   C. More species can survive in Wakatobi.
   D. The temperatures can influence coral reef ecosystems.
   E. Coral reefs are place of marine species to live.

8. From the text, we can conclude that the writer presents … to support his argument.
   A. facts
   B. opinions
   C. expert's quotes
   D. judgement
   E. testimony

Social media usage continues to grow as people share posts, videos, and photos. However, there are data privacy issues and risks with sharing on social media. Data privacy is important as users leave digital footprints on a daily basis, but using social media may put the users' personal data at risk without knowing it. Data protection issues and loopholes in privacy controls can put user information at risk when using social media.

First, scammers can find enough information to steal identities. They do not need a great deal of information to steal someone's identity. They can start with publicly available information on social media to help target victims. For example, scammers can gather usernames, addresses, email addresses, and phone numbers to target users with phishing scams. Even with an email address or phone number, a scammer can find more information, such as leaked passwords, social security numbers, and credit card numbers.

Second, there are privacy setting loopholes. Social media accounts may not be as private as users think. For example, if a user shared something with a friend and they reposted it, the friend's friends can also see the information. The original user's reposted information is now in front of a completely difference audience. Even closed groups may not be completely private because postings can be searchable, including many comments.

To sum up, when users create a social media account and use the platform, they leave a digital footprint on the internet. When scammers can steal the users' identities and there is loopholes in privacy controls, the users may have social media privacy issues.

Cyanide fishing is a fishing technique used to gather fish for aquaria. In this process, a cyanide solution is used to stun fish for easier collection. This method can kill neighboring fish communities and severely harm coral reefs. Recent studies have shown that the combination of cyanide use and stress of post capture handling results in mortality of up to 75% of the organism within less than 48 hours of capture. With such high mortality numbers, a greater number of fish must be caught in order to supplement post-catch death.

31. The synonym of the word "mortality" is ….

32. It can be concluded that cyanide fishing is ….

I live in a little village called Lemo in Tana Toraja about 310 km from Makassar. You need to use a bus to reach here because this is far away from Makassar. You may get seasick on a bus because it is rocking so much. Although it's a long way and hard to enjoy the bus trip, it is well worth the effort. Since the panorama is beautiful, you may see lots of rice fields, lots of gardens being grown. The most interesting part from Tana Toraja is actually a cemetery. People carved holes into the wall of rock and they have built statues to hold ashes or bodies of the people that have passed away. It's a super unique ritual where the higher up the person is the higher the rank obviously.

33. Lemo is the name of a … in Tana Toraja.

34. The most interesting part from Toraja is ….

35. The "synonym" of panorama is ….

In my opinion, Jikumerasa Beach is one of the beautiful beaches that you must visit when you travel to Buru Island, Maluku. On Jikumerasa Beach area, you will find several unique spots that you must explore. Located approximately 10 km from the center of the city, making this beach a favorite choice for tourists from abroad or within the country. I believe that the stretch of white sand with its fine grains and clear sea water makes anyone tempted to come to this beach area. In addition, you can see interesting marine biota. Therefore, snorkeling can be one of the activities that you should do. However, if you want to do snorkeling, you have to bring your own equipment. Because in this beach, there is no place to rent out the equipment.
