

Future Perfect

Sometimes, when you talk about the future, you must also tell about things that will be finished or over before that future time. This is when you use the future perfect.

Future perfect verbs have three parts:

will + have + past participle

Examples:

She will start university in two years. She will have finished high school by then.

If we don't hurry, there will be no tickets left! Other people will have bought all the tickets.

Fill in the blanks to make these sentences future perfect.

Example:

I think all the candy will be gone tomorrow. My dad _____ it. (eat)
→ I think all the candy will be gone tomorrow. My dad will have eaten it.

1. I will go outside at three o'clock.

I _____ (do) all my homework by then.

2. The alarm clock will wake her up at 7:00.

By then she _____ (sleep) for ten hours.

3. Your parents won't be home when you get home from school.

They _____ (go) to the grocery store.

4. By the end of the day, he will be tired of sitting in his chair.

He _____ (sit) there for eight hours.

5. There won't be any geese on the lake in December.

They _____ (fly) south for the winter.

6. My teacher is grumpy now, but she will be happier in ten minutes.

She _____ (drink) all her coffee by then.

7. Please call on me again in five minutes.

I _____ (think) of the answer by then.

8. We can come and pick up the car from the auto shop in two hours.

They _____ (fix) it by then.
