I learned how to drive a car with my brother, Tanzania. One day we went to a village road which was quiet enough for me to start learning and he let me to drive the manual car. I was nervous but I was brave. I understood the theory of moving the gears and clutch, I just needed to make it into practice.

I drove the car slowly and went faster than a normal speed, then Tanzania shouted that there was a cat. I hit the brake all of a sudden and screamed “did I hit the cat? Is it dead? Is it dead?” I was so scared that I hit it but then Tanzania said “no, go on!” I continued shouting asking him if the cat was ok, but then I realized that my brother only wanted to test my reflex. He smiled and congratulated me.
