Young Singer

Once there was a girl called Chris. She was born in Australia in New South Wales. Her mother was a teacher and her father was a jazz musician. Chris liked to sing with him when he played the piano. When Chris was 7, her family moved to Sydney, where she went to school. She often took part in school concerts. She acted in pantomimes, played the piano and the guitar. Soon Chris joined a group of teenager musicians and began to sing with them. She also bought costumes for their performances — black jeans, purple shirts and bright scarves. In these clothes they looked very stylish and hard to forget.
