I. Click here and read the text to complete the tasks

The sun goes down. It is dark outside. You feel tired. You want to go to sleep. All living things-from humans to bugs-sleep every day.

Our bodies are like machines. We use them all day long. We keep moving and breathing with our bodies. But machines need to rest sometimes. So do our bodies. During sleep, our bodies rest. They build up energy for the next day. Our bodies slow down. Our hearts beat slowly, and our muscles relax.

But our brains are still active even while we are sleeping! Our brains remember what we did that day. When we sleep, our brains put the memories into the right places, or they throw some memories away. This is how we remember important things and forget bad things.

Sometimes your mom gets angry if you sleep a lot. But now you can tell her your body is resting and your brain is trying to forget bad things.
