B & S provides essential oils, perfumes and cosmetics to aromatherapists around the world. Former chemistry teacher Bernie and his son and partner Sandy set up the firm in 1983 – right at the start of today's interest in aromatherapy. At that time it was scarcely known so they had to learn about the subject by reading the work of herbalists and scientists. They even went to Egypt to examine the use of oils, perfumes and cosmetics in Ancient Egypt. Starting at home filling bottles in the kitchen, Bernie and Sandy were always conscious of quality and introduced a certificate of quality scheme. Bernie uses his chemistry background to test every sample from around the world. Lavender oil from France, Croatia or Bulgaria stands next to chamomile from Morocco or frankincense from Somalia. The most expensive oils, made from rose petals from Morocco or Bulgaria, cost around 3000 pounds a litre. The firm employs just six staff but is now selling lavender oil to France – a country with its own fields of lavender, and perfumes to Arabic countries – once famous as the source of perfumes. They also sell their products to Japan, Korea, the USA and Australia.
