Nico the surfing dog!

The last World Dog Surfing Championships, organised in San Francisco Bay, were won by Nico, the labrador. The judges gave him the highest scores for confidence and style. After the victory, Nico's owner, Mark, was asked how he taught his dog to surf. The answer is, he didn't teach him at all! Nico learned to surf by observing Mark, who is a surfer himself. One day the dog just jumped on the board and off he went! Mark realised that his dog was very intelligent so he decided to train Nico to be a service dog*. Unfortunately, the dog was a poor student and couldn't learn the necessary tricks. Then, Mark came up with another idea. He realised that people loved watching videos showing Nico surfing, so he decided to use it to earn money which he could give to people in need. Mark invited a disabled person to surf with Nico and filmed a short video. Although the dog was a poor student before, he became an excellent surfing companion! He gave confidence to the person surfing with him on the same board. The video went viral! Because of their fame, Nico and Mark have already donated over $20,000 to charity.

* A service dog is a dog trained to help people with disabilities (for example people who have problems with their sight, hearing or movement).
