A HISTORY OF PORTABLE MUSIC PLAYERS BY MUSICMAN

Nowadays, we can download music onto our smartphones and listen to it when and where we want. But it hasn't always been this easy to listen to music as you move around.

- In 1962 Henry Kloss invented the first 'portable' music system. 'Portable' things are usually easy to carry but this record player was so big that it had its own suitcase!
- The first portable cassette player in 1965 was big and it weighed 1.5 kilograms with five heavy batteries inside. Modern smartphones weigh about 0.13 kilograms!
- In 1978 the Sony Walkman cassette player allowed people to carry music with them and listen on headphones for the first time, but it was still too big to put in your pocket and it weighed 1.1kg. From 1984, there were also portable CD players with better sound, but they used a lot of battery power and you couldn't move too quickly with them because the CD would skip or stop.
- The first mp3 players (most famously the iPod in 2001), changed portable music forever. Hundreds of songs could now be transferred from computers and put on one small device.

Can you remember any of the earlier players? Did you have a portable cassette player?

William Kamkwamba was born in Malawi, Africa in very poor conditions. He grew up without electricity or running water. After he was 14, he couldn't go to school because his family were poor. However, there was a local library, so he went there instead. He could read books and teach himself things. William was very interested in reading about how windmills could make electricity and pump water. So he decided to build a windmill. William's windmill was very successful, and he won a scholarship to a university in South Africa. Now he can teach young people how to make their own windmills and repair water pumps.

Sandra Ferreira de Souza grew up on the streets of São Paulo, Brazil. She couldn't work because she was so young, so she begged for money to survive. She became pregnant when she was just a teenager. An organization Lua Nova, which helps pregnant women in Brazil, gave her somewhere to live. After she had her baby, Lua Nova helped Sandra to learn about building, so that she could get a job. Sandra and other women like her learnt a lot. She can now make bricks and sell them, and she can build a house. Some people think that women can't be builders, but Sandra knows that they are wrong. In fact, some people prefer women builders because they think that women are more careful. Sandra now lives with her three children in a house that she built herself.
