As I sat in my classroom and stared out the window, I could see the _____ sky dotted with white _____ clouds. The sun shone _____ that morning and seemed to make everything outdoors come alive as the birds sang _____ and the colours of the flowers and trees seemed to show off their _____ for all to see. The light even found its way into our classroom making it _____ and _____. It seemed to be the perfect day but _____ my daydream was interrupted by a _____ "Good morning class."

My teacher had just entered the classroom and _____ gripped her handbag which carried our weekly test papers from the past week. She seemed _____ and _____ as she _____ the bag of papers on her _____ desk and flopped down in her _____ chair. Her eyes _____ scanned the classroom as she seemed to look for the children who were the cause of her discomfort. Unfortunately, her eyes fell upon me and her lips _____ in, her nose _____, and her eyes seemed to _____ as she focused on me. She seemed _____ angry as she stared at me.

She spoke _____ at first. "Class, do you know what I received in the _____ of someone's test papers last week?" she asked. The class sat up _____ and listened _____ to what she explained next. She went on to read a note that she found in between the test papers. The note went on to explain how much a particular student liked another and miss then went on to explain the drawings of hearts and flowers all over the note. The students all giggled and whispered. I _____ and swallowed a large _____ of air. That was mine! Oh, how embarrassing! I was doodling when I completed the test before time and lost track of what I did with the paper. It apparently got stuck between my tests.

_____ miss did not _____ the name of the student who wrote the letter but instead made several _____ at me with serious eyes. She advised the class to remain _____ on their work and not to become _____. As she continued, she reminded the class to use our time _____ in exams and recommended that we check over our answers.

I remained _____ as a lamb as I sat in my seat and thought about my actions. It was very _____ of me to do something like that during an exam and I was very _____ that my teacher did not say my name as she read the note. After class I met with my teacher outside the classroom and _____ for my actions. I promised that I would not do it again and _____ her for not telling the class that it was me. She smiled _____ and responded, "I only want the best for you Christina, despite what you may think."
