Why I like chess

Jake
My big sister bought me a chess set for my 7th birthday and taught me the rules. I loved it! Unfortunately, she didn't have time to play with me very often, so my dad looked on the internet and found a chess club in my town for me to join. I met lots of children there who love chess as much as I do, and now we spend all our free time together. We travel to competitions too. We haven't won any yet, but we hope to soon!

Ellis
When I was six, I watched my dad and one of his friends playing chess. I thought it was amazing, and afterwards my dad showed me how to move the pieces. We often play together now. I try hard but I still make lots of mistakes. I am better than my school friends, though. We had a competition at school last month and I came first!

An interview with teenage ballet dancer Paul Ashton

by Sandra Jones, aged 10

16-year-old Paul Ashton was born in France but grew up in South Africa, where he goes to a ballet school. At the moment he is in a show in London. My class went to see the show, and afterwards we met Paul at the theatre and asked him some questions.

Paul, when did you start doing ballet?
I was at primary school, in Grade 3, so I was 9 years old. We had to choose an activity to do after school, like singing or basketball. I'm not sure why, but I chose ballet. There were 10 of us in the ballet class and I was the only boy!

Were you the best in the class?
Well, yes. I'm not tall like most boys who do ballet, but I'm very strong. That helped a lot – I can jump higher than many dancers I know.

Tell me about a usual day at ballet school.
We get up at about 6 a.m. That's not easy for me – I'd love to sleep later! Then we have dance classes for four hours. After lunch, we do normal lessons like maths and English.

And what do you do in your free time?
I enjoy reading, but swimming's what I like best. And I like painting pictures, too.
