In the USA, some students go to college to play soccer. During the week, college soccer players study their academic subjects in the morning, and, in the afternoon, they practise their soccer skills.

At the weekend, college soccer players never study because there are important games. They play in the afternoon, but they prepare in the morning.

American colleges don't give players money, but their lessons are often free.

College soccer is very popular in the USA. There are about 1,500 women's soccer teams and 1,400 men's teams, and, at some colleges, 5,000 people come to watch every match. That's a lot!

Are you good at soccer? Go to an American college. It's a fantastic place to play.
