Ku Klux Klan   a letter   on board   dead   murderers five orange pips   a sea port

Why should Elias Openshaw, an ex-planter from the southern states of America, now living in Horsham, England, be afraid of _____ which arrive one day in an envelope marked KKK? Whatever the reason, his fears are justified as, within ten weeks, he is _____ following an apparent accident. His brother, Joseph, inherits the house and eventually also receives five orange pips. This time it is only four days before he dies, again apparently accidentally. Now it is John Openshaw's turn to inherit the house and, it seems, the danger, as he too receives _____ with five orange pips. He goes to Sherlock Holmes but it is too late. On his way home, he also meets with an 'accident'.

Holmes does some research and discovers that KKK means _____, a secret organisation against black people in the southern United States. He also realises that each letter with the pips was posted from _____, and the distance from the port to Horsham equates to the time before the letter and the death.

Therefore, the sender was _____ a ship, and only one ship from America matches the dates at each seaport. Holmes sends a letter to the ship, warning the _____ that he is on their trail, but the ship goes down and a higher authority exacts revenge.
